Guttorm Guleng, a resident in dermatology in Oslo, is a board member of the Norwegian Dermatological Society.

There is at the moment no specific association for young dermatologists in Norway.

However, the Norwegian Dermatological Society has focus on some important fields affecting especially young dermatologists:

1) Contribute to a strengthening of dermatological research. This has so far been done by initiating a meeting for dermatologists engaged in research projects, establishing a research-committee, and providing funds and scholarships.

2) Expand the amount of courses approved as a part of the dermatological education. In Norway, a number of courses are not approved as part of the dermatological education, even though they cover important aspects also considering dermatology. An increase of approved courses will hopefully strengthen the dermatological education.
