

Fig. S1. Stepwise linear regression analyses. Depression was a significant predictor of self-rated induced itch in patients with atopic dermatitis (AD) ($n=27$; corrected $R^2=0.175$) (A), while agreeableness and public self-consciousness were significant predictors of induced scratch movements in this patient group ($n=27$; corrected $R^2=0.534$) (B).