

BOOK REVIEW

Laser in Dermatology by S. W. Lanigan. Hardcover. 112 pages. ISBN 1-85233-277-8. Price DM 198. Springer-Verlag, Heidelberg. 2000.

In recent years, lasers have revolutionized the treatment of some dermatological conditions, e. g. naevus flammeus. The author of this book explains the physical properties of laser radiation in an elegant and easy to understand way. There is even a chapter dealing with the safe use of lasers, which is an important aspect of their everyday use.

The chapter entitled "Laser treatment of cutaneous vascular lesions" gives "hands-on" recommendations. However, a table demonstrating suitable energy levels would have been of value.

The chapter dealing with carbon dioxide and erbium:YAG lasers is well written and up to date, and includes resurfacing. This has become a major field in laser dermatology, especially in the US. Unfortunately, some of the photographs taken before and after treatment do not have the same exposure settings and this therefore makes it difficult to evaluate the effect of treatment.

Recently, lasers have been used for hair removal and the book gives a thorough description of this procedure. The section dealing with photodynamic therapy is too short and should either have been extended or omitted. The book is often rather text-heavy and there is a relative lack of tables which makes it quite difficult to read in places. In summary though, this book is valuable for dermatologists using lasers.
